Council grapples on regional water company concept

It was appropriate that it was morn- ing Monday’s Carlinville City Council meeting, because a large chunk of the meeting was dedicated to discussing the city’s water source and possible involvement with a wa- ter commission.

The council in turn gave the go-ahead to explore joining the Illinois Alluvial Rural Water Company (IAR- WC) with Fosterburg, Jersey County Rural Water Company and possibly Jerseyville. The plan involves use of groundwater pumped from an aquifer located in Jersey County. The city would then pay $50,000 per the project. Other options include ramping up the Carlinville’s Lake, or looking at be- coming a customer of Litchfield.

With the recent announcement that Fosterburg had dropped out of the regional concept and that Litchfield may become a player in the for- mation, it created questions from council members as to what the city should move forward.

The council could take another vote on the matter at the January meeting, six months after the original decision had been made.

Bertinetti steps down as city attorney; O’Brien takes helm

Councilman Cindy Campbell rep- orted the city in the regional water board and was among those at the last meeting in Jerseyville on Nov. 30.

She updated the board on what took place at the meeting, which included city members Brian Town, Randy Bilbruck and Kim Bergott at- tending to get a grasp on what was taking place as they attempt to form this new company.

Alisa Denogram of Jerseyville was an attendee of the com- mission; Campbell was appointed its president, also Campbell of Donger approved the treasurer. An attorney is hired and assigned to look into the notion of forming a company.

Bilbruck brought up the discus- sion on the water company, stating the city is in dire need of finding a solution to the water situation in Carlinville.

The city is also looking to continue to look at other options.

CAH honored for excellence

The Illinois Critical Access Hospital Network (CAH) recently recognized its first cohort of CAHs for their ongoing commitment to improving the quality of care for their community. The4th Annual CAH Network CAH Quality Awards were presented to 30 hospitals in the state that have made significant progress in the areas of care coordination, patient engagement, care transitions, and outpatient treatment. “Often, in rural hospitals, you have a single staff member to contact and all the data that can be shared between them is crucial,” said Angie Charboneau, CAH Quality Manager. “We’re proud of our team that works hard to achieve the necessary outcomes and care experience that our patients and staff can be proud of.”

Christian cheer requires some effort. It’s not always easy to pull all the pieces together to make it happen. While Dec. 25 always manages to come around every year, it would be just another day of the year if it weren’t for the dedicated people in our lives who hang themselves and ornaments would bring cheer to our homes and communities.

The sooner that children can realize the importance of working together for a common goal, the better off those children and little ones will be. With a little help from the parents, the children check the order and then go to work in creating the drink that the sign has ordered. Once a number of drink orders have been fulfilled, they are loaded onto a delivery cart, which is then delivered by a cab driver to the respective customers on a timely basis.
